Upland places moratorium on condo conversions

By DON GREEN Staff Writer

Concerned over a growing trend in the Southland, the Upland City Council Monday night declared a four-month moratorium on the conversion of apartments into condominiums while the city drafts regulations.

The council adopted the ordinance as an urgency measure, which means its provisions go into effect immediately. With Frank Hoover dissenting, the ordinance received the four votes needed for urgency

In recent years, the city has received apparently only one formal request to convert existing apartments into

The planning commission rejected that request, both the conditional-use permit and tentative tract map, by Lewis Development Co. in September. At issue were the North Upland Terrace Apartments, 1460 W. Foothill City officials recalled one conversion early in the However, City Manager Lee Travers said, "We've had a number of inquiries from apartment owners on conversion and to avoid the city's sort of being put in the box but not having legislation on this matter, we feel it is in the interest of citizens that we do move ahead with urgency adoption of this ordinance.

He added, "The city staff feels the need to have time to properly address all the ramifications.

Voicing his support, Councilman Bill Bottin said, "It's been rather evident all over Southern California recently the changes in this particular area

"A lot of people - young people, elderly people - have been forced out of apartments in which they have been living for years and years, or else they've been given the option of purchasing it at an exorbitant price, one which

He added, "I would like to see us put a stop to it before it gets started if possible.

Mayor Pro Tem John McCarthy said, "I don't feel that most apartments in the area meet the criteria that we have on condominium development

Apartments frequently have greater densities and less open space than required for condominium projects, he

He called Upland's vacancy rate "very low," adding that the four-month moratorium is unlikely to create a hardship for any apartment owner

City Attorney Donald Maroney said, "We have some controls but they're rather perfunctory. If they comply with requirements, then they're allowed

Mayor George Gibson agreed with need for an ordinance governing conversions, but questioned the length of the four-month moratorium and its urgency

Travers brought the moratorium before the council as a "city manager item" on the agenda. There was no advance public notice or public hearing. Neither was required

After the meeting, Travers explained that the ordinance was drafted last Friday, too late for the council agenda. He said recent conferences by the League of California Cities helped focus Upland's

Quick adoption of the ordinance could help prevent apartment owners from investing in conversions that might not pan out under the regulations Upland will develop, Travers added.

The recently adopted housing element of Upland's general plan assigned a high priority to an ordinance controlling conversions.

Hoover said he sees the need for restrictions on conversions, but voted against the ordinance out of a

Crowded elementary schools and the busing of students to alleviate overcrowding and for integration puposes seemed to be the main concerns at a forum for Upland school board candidates Thursday

Seven of nine trustee candidates appeared to talk about their qualifications, reasons for running and to field questions from the audience

The candidates for two four-year terms on the board of trustees were each given 15 minutes to speak on issues, including salary negotiations, teacher preparation time, the voucher system and state arbitrators.

A small crowd of 15 persons gathered at St. Mark's Episcopal Church for the forum sponsored by the Upland Teacher's Association.

On the problem of crowded schools in northern Upland and smaller enrollments in southern Upland schools, Jay R. Thrasher, a retired elementary educator, was unable to give any immediate solutions.

Thrasher said he felt that education should be based on a neighborhood school program and that busing students to less crowded schools was an imposition on children and parents. He said low in skills tests last October showed a marked improvement in May testing, according to results announced this week.

Students in Upland improve skills tests

In October 1978 comprehensive tests of basic skills, 895 out of nearly 6,000 Upland School District students scored in the bottom portion of the national quartile.

Yet, when the same test was given to students in May of this year, 561 of those scoring in the lowest bracket before had moved up to higher quartiles leaving only 334 in the bottom rank.

Loren Sanchez, district assistant superintendent of instruction, said the results of the students moving up were "encouraging."

The comprehensive test of basic skills has been given twice each school year for the past few years to through eight. The test covers skills in reading, language and math.

Different tests are given to students at each grade level.

Throughout the district, scores were as expected, with the average showing a mininum advancement of one-tenth of a grade level for each month in school.

Eighth-graders taking the test in October ranked at 8.4, which indicates a student is at the national level of an eighth-grade student after four months into the school year. In May, the average for the graduating junior high students showed 9.3 — a nine-month gain placing the average eighth-grader at the high school freshman threeneighborhood schools seems to be the only way to exist at this time.

Jeanne M. Brown, a parent and retired probation officer, responded to the question of overcrowding with a question.

How do parents feel about it?' she asked. Brown said the district is not in a position to build new schools and she would have to listen to feelings on the subject before making a decision.

It's time to again study the problem of crowded schools, said homemaker and PTA activist Donna Vandersall. Vandersall said it has been three years since the problem had been studied.

Asked on how he would feel about redistricting to relieve overcrowding, businessman and former district teacher Rick Minnis said communication would have to precede any action the board would

In his opening statement, Minnis stressed the need for communication on a personal oneon-one level for trustees, teachers, staff and parents and students. He said there is "validity in neighborhood schools."

Vicky L. Argyle, a homemaker, didn't have a clear solution to the problem of overcrowding either. She said the climate is not right for the building of new schools and she was in favor of children going to the school closest to their home, or, at the least, the second closest school. Lynn H. Eppey, a businessman, said he would probably be in favor of boundary changes to eliminate crowded conditions. He said he believes a decision on boundary changes should be made by the school board, because putting the issue before voters would not solve the matter.

Asked what he felt was his definition of a good quality education, parent and teacher Don Cataldo said it was the combination of basic skills along with "wellrounded" activities for physical and mental growth.

Cataldo stressed that an individual approach was the best way to obtain an education.

Thrasher was asked if he would ever vote against items on the board's agenda that are reccommended bv superintendent. Thrasher said he would if the item was not in the best interests of those involved.

In her opening statements, Vandersall said that busing is an issue that area residents will be faced with soon. She said now is the time to make the schools equal and improve them to the same level so that busing is not needed to achieve racial integration.

One teacher in the audience voiced concern over the seemingly 'rubber stamp' action of confidential, management and administrative workers getting the same percentage pay raise soon after certificated staff had worked hard at negotiating a contract.

Minnis responded saying he thought that group should have to bargain just like certificated and classified workers do. "All it takes is just one person to break (such) a pattern." he said.

On the issue of the voucher system where the state would issue money to whatever school a parent chooses for a child's education there was mixed reaction.

Argyle said she would be in favor of the plan if there were no government strings attached to the money, but Eppey received immediate applause from the audience when he called the plan idiotic and asinine.

Following the public forum. members of the Upland Teacher's Association met to endorse two candidates. They selected Minnis and present board chairman Barry Brandt and Judith M. Stillwell did not attend the forum.

Center offers new skill to farm workers

By DON GREEN Staff Writer

A training center in Upland is converting farm workers into welders, bringing them a new way of life along with the jobs.

Campensinos Unidos Inc. (CUI), "farm workers united," opened the training center at 1787 W. Arrow Highway about four months ago.

Luis Fuentes, manpower services coordinator for CUI, said that since then all 22 students who have passed through the training center have been placed in jobs with private in-

CUI, which has its area office on F Street in Ontario, offers counseling, a combination of classroom and onthe-job training and support services to help farm workers make the transition to a new way of life.

The center is funded through the U.S. Department of Labor under the Comprehensive Education and Training Act (CETA). Students earn while they learn, making $3.10 an hour for eight hours a day of week-day instruction at the center.

Fuentes said CUI realizes the need still exists for agricultural workers, adding that the organization is not out to take all laborers from the fields.

"Some people have been doing field work all their lives. Those people you're not going to convince. It's a way of life and they feel happy at

But for those farm workers looking for alternatives, CUI tries to provide them, he added.

Fuentes said not every farm worker wants to become a welder. CUI also has a machine and metal training center in San Marcos and a clerical and secretarial school in Brawley

Arnoldo Resindez, associate director for CUI, said the organization also has plans to open an electrical skill center in Garden Grove and a carpentry center in Coachella. He added that CUI has two centers for teaching English as a second language in Anaheim and Part of CUI's task is to help relocate farm workers near the training centers.

Robert Fernandez, welding instructor for CUI, said students can receive a maximum of six months' training, but stressed that the training center has an "open exit"

He explained that the instruction is geared to each student's pace of learning, adding some are ready for on-the-job training earlier than facing many farm workers looking for job alternatives is English. Depending on the need, students can spend up to half their day's instruction in the classroom.

Other instruction includes reading of blue prints, mathematics and geometry "so that when students are on the job they're not caught cold," Fernandez said.

Because farm workers are often on the move, their education suffers, Fernandez noted. He teaches gas, arc, mig and tig welding. Fuentes said the center has 20 to 25 students when instruction is in Fernandez noted the center tries to give students an on-the-job atmosphere to help prepare them for later employment. Students punch a time clock, he noted. He said the majority come to the center with no experience in welding and that some at first need to learn proper use of more basic tools, such as pliers and hammers. Fuentes said a key to making the program work has been the support

'What's really surprising is that the private sector has been very supportive.'

Allan Gerwig, CUI's job developer, makes contacts with businesses in the area, and Fuentes said when one student works out, it paves the way for others.

CETA subsidizes their salaries during on-the-job training, paying half their wages and giving employers an incentive to take part in the program. The subsidies last up to three months.

Before entering the training program, farm workers must meet income guidelines. Fuentes explained that those guidelines require that at least half a person's income during a period of any 12 consecutive months in the last two years has come from farm work.

CUI support services include anything from helping make sure a student's car is in working order to attend the training center to following up on students' progress on the

$3 million center ok'd

The Upland City Council approved plans Monday night for a $3 million shopping center on Foothill Boulevard, but will take another look at three restaurants proposed for the project. Watt Commercial Properties Inc. of Santa Monica is the developer for the shopping center planned on 10.3 acres at the northwest corner of Foothill and Grove Avenue. The center features seven buildings, totaling about 101,000 square feet, and will be "anchored" by a Zody's department store.

Kelly Nesheim, president of Watt Commercial Properties, said Zody's, whose store will account for 59,000 square feet, is the center's only committed tenant at this time.

Nesheim said construction costs will exceed $3 million.

The board also approved letters to be sent to service station owners thanking them for their participation in the program and asking for their future cooperation should the program be needed again.

In signing the order for the latest dropouts, Curb said he was happy to comply with the counties' requests. He said he hoped "more effort will go into solving the long-term gasoline problems so that odd-even will become a thing of the past.'

Brown has been reluctant to release counties from the odd-even system because he believes restricting sales to alternate days depending on the last digit of the license plate is a potent reminder to conserve fuel.

A change in regulations is trimming federally-funded obs from local government payrolls across the country, but few workers in West End cities have been laid off.

The real impact, local personnel directors said, will be on the future of programs financed under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). Few cities, if any, will ever again have the dozens of CETA employees they had when the program was at its height. Last year, the Department of Labor directed that no CETA workers could remain on the program longer than 18 months, beginning in April 1978.

The Labor Department also instituted wage ceilings where none previously existed, thus lowering the wages cities could pay

Ontario was hit hardest by the rule changes, according to CETA program administrator Arlene Berman, who said that approximately 60 members of the 150-person CETA work force had been scheduled for termination on

Through a waiver process, the city was able to keep 24 of those people temporarily, she said, adding they will probably be gone in about six months. The remainder of Fun After Fifty personnel directors.

Few CETA workers lost jobs

Most of the cities were in the same boat as Upland, where "the impact is very minimal at this point because they (the workers) all expected it," according to personnel officer Mary Ann Reiss. She said the city lost two employees and the remaining five, the last of the CETA workers, will probably leave next month.

Some found jobs on their own and the city tried to place as many within its own ranks as possible, she said, adding it is unlikely Upland will hire many more CETA

San Bernardino County was looking ahead and benefited from its experience under Proposition 13, according to personnel director Martin Nelson

'We have had a specific program so there would be 100 percent transition (into the county work force) and there has been 100 percent transition," he said, explaining that the county created an assignment and assessment unit to place CETA employees about to be terminated into other county jobs.

The county did this because a number of workers were lost under the budget-cutting influence of the taxslashing measure

When the Labor Department announced its new restrictions, the county simply applied the program to the CETA workers it knew it would lose, Martin said, adding he was hopeful the unit's success would continue. Cities like Rancho Cucamonga hired, under the CETA program, people to fill key positions, so it simply switched them to the city payroll. The real difficulty, said the personnel directors; is filling CETA positions in the city because the jurisdiction must have a comparable position with a wage similar to the CETA position's wage. It is an impossible demand, they said, since the Labor Department put the wage ceiling at $3.27 an hour. The restrictions "have just about limited our opportunities to hire anybody except a receptionist,' said Montclair Assistant City Administrator Randy Johnson. Receptionists are at the bottom of the wage Riverside counties formed a coalition Wednesday to push greater Hispanic participation in upcoming local elections.

More than 80 delegates from area Hispanic organizations attended a meeting Wednesday in San Bernardino hosted by the Congreso Para Pueblos Unidos (Congress for United Communities).

Similar "summit meetings" are scheduled later this month in Orange County and early next month in San Diego, according to Ar-

Hispanic group coalition Hispanic organizations mando Navarro, CPU exe- meeting is tentatively set from San Bernardino and cutive director. A statewide for January.

'The Satiric Vision,' panorama of visual humor seen at college

By ILA WALES Staff Writer

Political and social commentary through art work has been a feature of American publications for at least a century, but the day-to-day impact is intensified in a comparison of cartoons printed decades

Such a comparison can be viewed this month at the Chaffey College Library, where a panorama of visual humor explores "The Satiric Vision.

Illustrations from Punch magazine, covers from The New Yorker magazine, Birgil Partch originals, rare illustrated books featuring the art of John Leech, and the works of William Hogarth, Thomas Nast, William Steig, Fish, Percy Crosby and Al Capp are included in the exhibit.

Two original cartoons by Chaffey

College art instructor Hendrik Grise are also included.

Library hours are from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and 6 to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Friday.

Also at Chaffey College, the Rex W. Wignall Museum Gallery is beginning the last two weeks of a pottery exhibit by Juan Quezada, an artist from the tiny village of Mata Ortiz, Mexico, who developed a style inspired by the prehistoric pottery types found in and around his village.

Quezada uses no potters wheel, no kiln and no processed clay material. Gallery hours are noon to 4 p.m.

Monday through Thursday, noon to 3 p.m. on Friday, 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday and 7 to 9 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday. The gallery is closed

Saturday and holidays.

The Scripps College Fine Arts Foundation will sponsor an art collection tour of two attorneys' offices and three private homes Oct.

Attorney Herbert Hafif will show tour members his collection of Albert Stewart's sculpture, marbles by Norman Hines, bronzes by Barbara Beretich, pottery by Harrison McIntosh, Rupert Deese and Ted Drake and a stainless steel by Jerry Mahoney.

William Shernoff, will show his collection of oils and watercolors by Millard Sheets and Phil Dyke and paintings by Brommer, Peake and Wood. Some of the furniture in his office was designed and crafted by Sam Maloof.

Cartoons illustrating "The Satiric Vision" will be displayed at the Chaffey College Library through Oct. 31. Included in the exhibit are "Hollywood Cafe," left, and "Jimmy's Coloring Book." The oldest cartoon is in a book dated 1851. Library hours are from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and 6 to 9 p.m. on Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Friday.

Survey shows people still favor Prop. 13

If it was on the ballot for the first time today, most people still would vote for Proposition 13.

But most don't think elected officials have followed through with the property tax limit measure approved in 1978

Those were the two most obvious indications from a survey conducted throughout the West End - Pomona Valley by the Ontario-Upland-Chino Board of Realtors.

The survey was printed Sept. 26 as an advertisement in area newspapers and paid for by the board of realtors. Results were released Wednesday

The governmental affairs committee of the board of realtors tabulated the results, according to Karen Hallmark, committee chair-

Between 170 and 175 people, from La Verne to Rancho Cucamonga, responded to the short survey, according to Hallmark, an Upland real estate investment counselor.

The issue must still be strong for so many people to respond to a oneday survey, Hallmark said.

"We (realtors) saw the need for people to make their feelings known, so we did the survey as a public service," she said.

We're very much a communityminded business and this survey was also done to let people know that," she added.

To the first survey question, "Would you vote for Proposition 13 today if it were to come on the ballot for the first time?" 142 said yes and 20 said no

A majority of those responding to the survey said Proposition 13 has not reduced government spending. To the question, "Do you believe Proposition 13 has reduced government spending?" 62 said yes and 94

An overwhelming percentage of those responding said local elected officials have not followed through in the "spririt of 13?" Only 26 thought they had.

To the question "How would you rate the spending efficiency of your city, state and national governments and school district?" many people said all governments were unacceptable, but many added city governments were doing a better job than other agencies.

A majority felt their family had been affected by major reductions in public services since the passage of Proposition 13 and cited city reductions in fire protection, library services, lifeguards, police protection, RTD bus service, road maintenance, street lighting, street weeping, and trash pick-up.

They also cited school reductions in custodial services, gardening services, sports programs, summer school and vocational courses. Those who responded were also asked to include personal comments, as well as occupation, age and city of residence.

Among the conclusions committee members were able to draw from the people who responded: - A wide variety of professions were represented, including housewives, farmers, truck drivers, teachers and lawvers.

. - Most of the people who answered the survey were grouped in the 36 to 50 age bracket.

Big Horn wilderness proposed Legislation setting aside 45,000 acres in the Angeles and San Bernardino National Forests for Big Horn Sheep Wilderness Area has been introduced by Rep. Jim Lloyd, D-35th Dist.

Lloyd's measure would increase by nearly 50 percent the National Park Service's recommendation for a sheep mountain wilderness area north of Pomona.

Lloyd claimed the additional acreage is needed to protect a very important lambing area. His proposal could draw opposition from Southern California skiers who are seeking construction of a ski trail on the northeast side of Mt. Baldy, the same area Lloyd's proposal would set aside. An aide to the congressman said the proposed ski trail would serve only a few expert skiers and has been considered to be economically unfeasible by the park service. The service claims the area is very rugged and lacks adequate snow for

Chino church aids Viet family

By RITA BUSBY Staff Writer

Until recently, the Thanh Tran family was among thousands of Vietnamese refugees languishing on an island sometimes referred to as "dia ngue," a Vietnamese phrase meaning "hell."

They had made their way to Pulau Bidong, one of several boat people's islands in Malaysia in November and stayed until the end of June, fighting rats, thieves, malnutrition and finally, mountains of red tape. Thu Thi Chau Tran, 38, gave birth to a child there and a 4-year-old son almost died of malnutrition. When she and her children came to the U.S., Thu's husband was left behind because of a lung ailment. By the end of June, the family's plight had drawn the attention of refugee authorities and the way was cleared to begin procedures to bring Thu and the children to the United States. They are sponsored by Christ Lutheran Church in Chino.

Thu says she is happy to be in the United States. She shares a sparsely furnished apartment in Glendale with two brothers who arrived less than a year ago.

She came with the baby, Nam Hoai, Hanh My Thi, 6, Trang My Thi, 5, and Son Hoanh, 4.

Her first question to strangers is always, "Can someone help my baby?" followed by, "When will my husband be able to come?"

She adds, "Can anyone get him here quickly?" The baby, little more than a naval experience that made passage

Once on the island, Tran earned a meager living by building and selling houses to accommodate the multitude of refugees flooding the island. Thu says her husband's health declined because he was working night and day.

Pay for his work was sometimes a handful of rice.

Son Hoanh, 4, his oversized belly showing mute evidence of malnutrition, was listed in critical condition on refugee lists. His illness sped his family's passage to the United

When the New York-based Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service learned of the plight of the Tran family, they asked the Chino church to sponsor the family in an effort to speed their immigration.

Before learning Thu's husband was too ill to travel, the Chino church had made arrangements to move the family to a ranch in Fontana. If Tran's health permits, the family may move to the ranch after he arrives.

"To leave him there was very sad," Thu says.

Officials say the husband will be able to join his family after tests and treatment, perhaps in one to three months.

In the meantime, church members in Chino have gathered some furniture, including a bedroom set, for the family

Thu's brother has given his guests the mattress that served as his only piece of furniture in his bedroom at the Glendale apartment. He sleeps on the floor.

Thu and her four children share another bedroom, with the mattress as their only piece of furnishing. But the home has plenty of food, with grapes a favorite with the children.

Tuyen, the translator, explained that grapes had been available on the island, but 30 grapes sold for $1. Because of the family's diet on the island, each member has several rotting teeth. A front tooth of Thu's, weakened from rot, broke off entirely during delivery of her baby

Thu smiles broadly, points to the tooth, covers her mouth as if embarrassed and conveys through her nephew, "I'd like to have my teeth fixed. But first — my baby (touching the child's mouth) - and can anyone get my husband here quickly?"

The Tran family, who arrived from the refugee island of Pulau Bidong recently, await the arrival of Thanh Tran, 39, who was unable to obtain clearance for immigration because of a lung ailment. The Christ Lutheran Church in Chino, sponsors of the family, obtained a bedroom set for the family and planned to replace the mattresses loaned by one of the Trans' relatives. (Staff photo by H. Lorren Au Jr.)

Once the victim of malnutrition that almost took his life. Son Hoanh Tran's condition sped his family's passage to the United States from a Malaysian refugee island where the family had languished for more than eight months. When the family arrived in the United States, the children immediately asked for McDonald's hamburgers. (Staff photo by H. Lorren Au Jr.)
